6	/10	Other
76	/100	Total

Notes

Push Feel

With a 'stiffer' click leaf by way of a different bend angle and a slightly heavier spring weight, the Harmonics are a functionally snappier, sharper feeling version of the innovative Gateron Melodic switch platform. While these boast the same smoothness and out-of-gate crispness as their predecessors, the click leaves do feel a bit more inconsistent from switch to switch than the Melodics, causing some switches to feel more thin and sharp through their mechanism point than others which are more rounded and soft.

Wobble

Even with a new dual-rail structure that presumably helps with stem wobble (?) these switches have a bit of stem wobble more so concentrated in the N/S direction than the E/W direction.

Sound

Admittedly, these are the types of clicky switches which I personally do not enjoy – sharp, prickly, and extremely pointed in their high pitched tone. However, the sound produced from these switches is not only largely clean from switch to switch, but one that is very stand out, unique, and something people would go out of their way to pursue ala classic clicky switches of old such as Kailh Box Jades and Navys.

Context

Priced at $0.65 per switch like the Melodics, these expansions of the Melodic platform are priced identically but do not have nearly the same amount of marketing or community excitement behind them as the Melodics. Even if this platform continues to expand, the similarity in their styles and tones will likely leave the Harmonics an eternal 'second fiddle' to the Melodics' clicks.

Other

While the mechanism of the Harmonics/Melodics is already frankenswitch-restricted, the Harmonics only further lean into that with the dual-rail design. Even when being a fun port from Gateron's HE line, they should be seeking to expand interchangeability instead of restricting it.
