

Greetech OG Brown (5 Pin)

Last Update: 12/07/2025

Greetech OG Brown
Switch Type: Tactile		Greetech
19	/35	Push Feel
14	/25	Wobble
3	/10	Sound
10	/20	Context
4	/10	Other
50	/100	Total

Notes

Push Feel

With a fairly centered, low strength and short tactile bump that is sandwiched on either side by long linear regions and somewhat firm housing collisions, the OG Brown switches are the quintessential full nylon, black OEM-style housing light tactile. That being said, though, they also carry no effective factory lubing, a strong amount of sandpapery scratch that gets worse with break in, and inconsistencies in the firmness and sharpness of bottom outs.

Wobble

While the Greetech OG Browns were designed to be improved versions of the classic OEM style browns that Greetech produced nearly a decade ago, not an ounce of work was done to improve stem wobble. These have massive amounts of N/S and E/W direction stem wobble that make their stems almost able to circle around in their top housings with a bit of force.

Sound

Painfully scratchy, inconsistently pingy, sometimes snappy through the bump, and variable housing collisions are all ways to describe the Greetech OG Browns. Really the only redeeming portion of their sound profiles are their deeper, solid housing collisions but even these feel cheapened and less enveloping than the classic Cherry-style nylon housings that they are clearly attempting to emulate.

Context

Marketing, long term availability, and community awareness are far from reasonable strong suits for Greetech and even so here in spite of being part of a renewed push for community attention. The only thing even minorly redeemable of these switches, as questionably so as this is, is the fact that they are dirt cheap at sub $0.20 per switch from Greetech's Taobao storefront.

Other

The only reason this has any points is to applaud Greetech for openly and clearly delineating retooling of their switches, something which other manufacturers historically have never done.

————— GOAT —————