Notes

Push Feel

Billed as the “Heavy Tactile” of Gateron’s 2025/2026 Full POM Smoothie series, the Banana Smoothies are a heavier set tactile with an early-in-downstroke bump that wide, medium-strong in force, and carries the switch seemingly the rest of the way to its extremely shortened bottom out point. The combination of the POM housings mixed with the okay-ish factory lubing and the scratch that it does provide leaves these switches feeling much more insulated and heavy throughout their strokes – something which is really only interrupted by their flat, but still punchy bottom out feeling.

Wobble

While the average switch is fairly low in stem wobble with only a tiny amount of equal magnitude N/S and E/W direction stem wobble, there is some batch-wide inconsistency with respect to such.

Sound

Similar to the push feeling notes above, the Banana Smoothie switches are surprising insulated and bassy in every portion of their stroke except for their bottom out. The scratch, mixed with a tiny bit of a fuzzy sounding tactile bump, is quite warm and inviting here but kind of jarringly paired with a higher pitched, somewhat more sharp snapping tone at the point of bottom out.

Context

Priced well at $0.50 per switch, the entirety of the Full POM Smoothies series have a chance at being strong contenders for entry level enthusiasts looking for the sound/feeling of full POM switches but are not sold on Kailh’s iterations. Longevity, though, will largely be relegated to how well these are marketed as thus far they’ve not been marketed much...

Other

Even with being a bit jumbled with everything tried to be cobbled together here, the Banana Smoothies are a pretty solid attempt at a full POM tactile switch by Gateron.
