HMX Cthulhu (50-56g)

Last Update: 09/27/2026

HMX Cthulhu (50-56g)
Switch Type: Linear		HMX
30	/35	Push Feel
24	/25	Wobble
7	/10	Sound
15	/20	Context
6	/10	Other
82	/100	Total

Notes

Push Feel

Bringing back some old school heavy handedness with the factory lubing, the HMX Cthulhu switches have a warm, fully embracing linear stroke that is capped off at the top end by a somewhat thin, but still poppy topping out. At slower actuation speeds the P7 (modified nylon) material bottom housings of these switches are dampening and give a soft, muted bottom out that gives way to snappy, rounded stem pole bottom out with a small footprint as typing speeds pick up. Irrespective of the two different typing modes that can be achieved on these switches, they are otherwise strongly consistent across all of these metrics for all switches.

Wobble

With only the tiniest amount of N/S direction stem wobble and virtually no E/W direction wobble, these switches are on the cusp of manufacturing perfection in terms of both their precision and cross batch consistency. You won't have an issue with these.

Sound

Medium in volume and full of well-rounded collisions as a result of the strong factory lubing, the HMX Cthulhu switches are linears driven by their subtly poking topping outs at slower actuation speed and the 1-2 punch of their snappier, more forceful bottom outs before those topping outs at higher actuation speeds. It should be noted, though, that these collisions are a bit asymmetrical with the topping out being thinner and a bit higher pitched than the bottom out.

Context

Priced at $0.35 per switch and sold at a whole wide range of vendors through not just release but a restock, the Cthulhu switches have strong contention for being among the most recognized linears of 2026, though with uncertain long term availability by their designer SULAB.

Other

Despite being made by HMX in 2026, these eloquently and cleanly mimic the heavily lubed and firmly dampened linears of the COVID peak in a way new and old enthusiasts will enjoy.

GOAT